If you're looking to get a little cultured this month, then we've got some ideas. Why not visit a local art gallery to appreciate some Lowcountry artists or get involved in a hands-on art event to expand your own skills? From pop-ups to workshops, here are a few artistic endeavors to check out before the end of June.

Creative Corridors

This month's Redux Contemporary Art Center exhibit is the annual studio artist exhibition. "Creative Corridors" will be on view through July 13 and features works from 23 different creatives. This year, Redux artists were asked to consider the community structure and interconnectivity of working out of the local gallery, as well as the dynamic nature of being a part of the greater creative community in Charleston.

The Halsey's latest free exhibit explores the concept of paradise, particularly Charleston as a paradise. Halsey programming includes several luncheons that bring together people in the community for conversations on issues affecting the Lowcountry. At noon Saturday, June 22, the topic at lunch will be land issues, from habitat loss to homelessness and gentrification. Bring a bagged lunch and break bread with artist Jennifer Wen Ma and other community members.
